Activity -Incharge	Dr. Reena Kumari
Event Summary	Road safety awareness plays a crucial role in reducing accidents, injuries, and fatalities on our roads. It encompasses various practices, rules, and behaviors that promote safe driving, pedestrian safety, and overall road etiquette. Here's why road safety awareness is so important: Firstly, it saves lives. Every year, millions of lives are lost globally due to road accidents. Educating drivers, pedestrians, and cyclists about traffic rules, safe driving practices, and the importance of wearing seat belts and helmets can significantly reduce fatalities. Secondly, it prevents injuries. Road accidents often lead to severe injuries that can have long-lasting physical, emotional, and financial consequences. By promoting awareness about defensive driving, speed limits, and avoiding distractions such as texting while driving, we can minimize the risk of accidents and subsequent injuries. Thirdly, it promotes responsible behavior. Awareness campaigns emphasize the importance of obeying traffic signals, yielding to pedestrians, and respecting other road users.

This fosters a culture of mutual respect and consideration on the roads, reducing road rage and aggressive driving incidents.

Moreover, road safety awareness contributes to economic stability. The costs associated with road accidents, including medical expenses, property damage, and lost productivity, are staggering. By preventing accidents through education and awareness, societies can save billions of dollars annually.

Lastly, it enhances community well-being. Safe roads create safer neighborhoods and communities where people feel secure while commuting or walking. Children can walk to school safely, seniors can cross roads without fear, and families can travel with peace of mind.

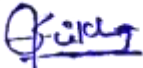

In conclusion, road safety awareness is not just about following rules; it's about promoting a culture of safety, responsibility, and respect for life on our roads. Through continuous education, enforcement of traffic laws, and public engagement, we can create safer environments for everyone.

3. Code of Ethics

Honestly and integrity are the basis of the college code of ethics. The college's highest values are supposed to guide its approach to problems. These ethical principles are based on its core values and standards. College ethics education has long been used as a means of civic advancement and character affirmation. Personal experiences and family lessons teach students to question ethical foundations. This helps them build a solid philosophy of life that will help them deal with future problems. We exist as an institution primarily due to students seeking admission and the trust of their parents. Research and education should be conducted in an academic freedom and integrity. We feel our responsibility to society.

Institution Organizes Professional Ethics Programs for Students, Teachers, Administrators and other staff Institution organizes professional ethics programs for students, teachers, administrators and other staff: Career Mahavidyalaya organizes professional ethics programs for students, and employees separately. During Fresher's welcome of the new student office of the Principal of Student's Welfare organizes the Fresher's welcome where teachers give lecture on the ethics of students, code of conduct of students and at Career Mahavidyalaya. Senior students also participate to share their experience at Career Mahavidyalaya. For the teachers, after joining they attend an orientation program in the College. From this program they gain knowledge of work ethics and understand the code of conduct applied for them.

Our students are continually exposed to and imprinted with the fundamental ethical principles of independence, preventing harm to others, lending a helping hand to all, fairness, and integrity. Universal brotherhood, the development of self-confidence, a wide and open mind to help the poor and needy, empathy for the oppressed, and ready-to-help attitudes are the fundamental cultures instilled on campus.

Young students should be taught professional ethics early on in order to transform them from the highly polluted business world to which they are exposed. Professional ethics is an unavoidable standard that should be strongly imprinted in their thoughts.
